THE COVER

The design on the Cover, taken from James Cavanah Murphy's The Arabian Antiquities of Spain, London, 1813 C.E. (1220 A.H.), represents "the elevation of the Gate of the Sanctuary of the Qur'an" in the Grand Mosque of Cordova, Spain. Mr. Murphy, whose The Arabian Antiquities took fourteen years to produce and cost him many thousands of pounds, was mainly responsible for drawing the attention of the civilized world to the preservation of Islamic treasures in Spain which the Spaniards were allowing to fall into disrepair. Mr. A. F. Calvert, in his Moorish Remains in Spain, London 1906, describes this Gate in the following words: "The Gate is indeed an assemblage of beauties rarely to be equalled. The two lines which are at the top and on either side of the arch are in mosaic on a blue ground with gold letters. The contrast is exceptionally striking . . . and the whole truly superb, but when illuminated by the massive silver lamps which hang down in its centre, the gorgeous beauty of the Qancarron (as this Sanctuary of the Qur'an was known then) must have surpassed everything that we can possibly conceive of splendour or magnificence."
